Semantix signs frame agreement for language services with Boliden AB

Languages and communications company Semantix has signed a frame agreement with Boliden AB. The new agreement covers the full range of language services: Translation of technical documentation and contracts, copywriting services and language training. Combined with the latest year's growth for Semantix in northern Sweden, this may lead to the creation of new jobs in Umeå.

"We are very glad to have been entrusted with becoming Boliden AB's supplier of language services. This is particularly pleasing since Boliden operates both in the local and global market, just like we do," says Maria Lundström, Client Account Manager at Semantix in Umeå, Semantix is Europe's leading supplier of professional language and communication services and has local offices across Sweden. Today, Semantix is present from Malmö in the south to Umeå in the north – and in Norway and Finland. The company collaborates with over 5,000 translators, interpreters and language consultants all over the world.

Boliden is a leading European metals corporation. The company works primarily with zinc and copper and its operations are divided into two divisions: Mines and Smelters. Boliden has around 4,600 employees and a turnover of SEK 30 billion. Its head office is located in Stockholm. ▶

Rapidly growing local office in Umeå

Semantix's local office in Umeå serves clients throughout northern Sweden in both the private and public sectors. Currently, the office employs seven people, and in recent years the number of clients in the region has grown strongly.

"We have had very positive growth in recent years and the agreement with Boliden is a solid evidence of our hard work," says David Karlsson, Regional Manager at Semantix. "We are now looking into the possibilities of recruiting additional personnel to meet the increased demand and our customers' growing needs."
